Keeping Transit in the Forefront

• Transit accommodations as part of the planning process
• Regional transit authorities receiving notification of planned development and being involved in the planning at the beginning of the project
• Transit accommodations and mitigation identified through the MEPA process
  • Reviewed and verified by the permitting agencies prior to permits being issued
Regional Transit Authorities

• TOD areas around Commuter Rail stations as a draw for those who don't wish to own a vehicle

• Require a strong transit system to serve transportation needs outside of transportation to employment

• Increased funding for RTAs in order to meet the demand of choice riders which will likely require a variety of funding sources including increased federal, state, and local funding as well as public/private partnerships
